

Sally the Sea Star: Helping Children Value Themselves as They Learn About Life in our Oceans

JOIN SALLY AND LEARN WHY STARFISH AREN'T CALLED STARFISH ANY MORE! I am not a starfish! I'm a sea star! Poor Sally is so confused. Everyone calls her a starfish but she's really a sea star. Come with Sally and meet all her new friends, as she learns about life in our oceans and how she discovers that she's unique and special. ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Kathy Steel is a writer and actress who lives at the New Jersey sea shore. While growing up, she spent her summers making fudge on the Atlantic City boardwalk, at her family's business, Steels Fudge, which has been in operation since 1919. Several years back, she developed a series of plays which taught children about life in our oceans. When Sally made her debut, numerous people commented that they didn't know starfish are now called sea stars. Young and old enjoy learning this little-known fact and Kathy thought it was time to tell the world. Kathy also substitute teaches, which she really enjoys. Sally's character, who seemed to float through life without really knowing who she was, hit a nerve with the author. Perhaps she could help children who didn't feel as though they fit it as well? Kathy certainly hopes so!
