

A Boys Fortune: or The Strange Adventures of Ben Baker

He was tall, dark-complexioned, slender, and had a kindly face. You seem to relish your supper, Johnny, he said. Yes, I do, but my name isnt Johnny. The young man smiled. Excuse me, he said, but in New York we call boys by that name, if we dont know their real names. I suppose you have not been here long? No; I only arrived this afternoon. Come to make your fortune, eh? Well, I dont know. I should like to, but if I can make a living it is all I expect. Besides, I have another object, added the boy, slowly. Were you ever here before? No, sir. You are up rather late. You dont sit up so late in the country, do you? Oh, no, I am in bed by nine oclock generally. We dont go to bed early here. I myself havent been in bed before midnight for three years. Do you like to sit up so late? asked Ben. I didnt at first. Now I am used to it. My business keeps me up late.
